

r/airbnb_hosts • 3mo ago

YIYBYMadison

Smart Lock Integration

Under the old smart lock integration guests received a message upon booking with their smart lock keypad code. Under the new integration, according to Airbnb support, the guest is supposed to go into messages and look at checking info for the code. Is this what others have experienced? Has anyone had issues with guests not knowing where to find their keypad code? Besides manually sending the code to the guest does anyone have any tips on how to confirm the guest received their keypad code?

1

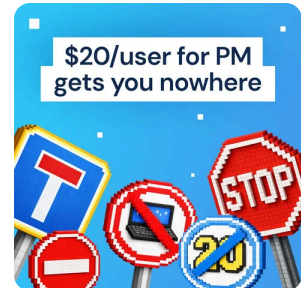

9

Bitrix24® Bitrix_24 • Promoted

Stop Overpaying for Your PM Tools. Try Bitrix24!

Learn Morebitrix24.comJoin the conversation

Sort by: Best ▾

Search CommentsAutoModerator App MOD • 3mo ago • Stickied commentComplete-Iron6554 • 3mo agoDullComedian4379 • 3mo ago

The Quick Replies thing helps but honestly what finally cut down my "where's the code?" messages was putting everything in one digital guide (door code, wifi, parking, checkout) and sending the link twice. Once when they book, once morning of check-in. Most people don't read anything the first time but actually look at it when they need it. I also put "check your Airbnb messages" on a little sign by the door for the really lost ones lol

Create

YIYBYMadison OP • 3mo ago

Got it, that's what I've been doing but it is not nearly as convenient as the old integration.

According-Data8773 • 3mo ago

If you use the built in Airbnb integration (airbnb.com/connect-your-lock) the code will appear on the reservation in the Airbnb app, in the email, and you can add it into any message template you send your guest.

YIYBYMadison OP • 3mo ago

Is there a way to automatically pull it into a message template?

According-Data8773 • 3mo ago

Yes. If you are using the message tools there should be a Door Code or something similar (not Suggested Door Code) in the template options

Grahamdini • 3mo ago

Thanks! I did some digging and figured out what you are talking about. I wish Airbnb support would have told me this. For those wondering this is what you can do:

Go to Messages, click Settings, and click Manage Quick Replies. Under Manage Quick Replies you can edit the existing options or create your own. I edited the before check-in option and included a line for my door code. Note: you need to use the "Add details" button and add the door code option to have it dynamically pull the code for the specific guest. After that I scheduled it to send 7 days prior to check-in for my listing.

I haven't had it actually send yet, but this seems to be the ticket.