Airbnb direct support for Schlage encode locks

Airbnb picked one door lock to offer direct integration to their platform for door codes.

The Schlage Encode.

This seemed to be the most popular and widely recommended lock on BP.

Can you have it automatically set the code to the last 4 of their phone number, or does it generate a random code?

I don't want to deal with random codes that nobody can remember. Never had a lock out issue sticking with the last 4.

Good to know.

And kind of surprising this didn't happen before.

If you integrate directly with Airbnb and don't use a PMS you're behind the game. Gotta get you a good PMS to manage effectively.

It is pricey but I've heard they are super reliable..

I used the August Yale ones for a bit and they work fairly well sending out automated codes but if the cube ever gets disconnected than it wont send codes. It is also kinda a pain in the butt to setup where they can send codes with the August Yale locks

Anyone have experience sending automated codes with the Encode on Airbnb?

Interesting, but since we use a PMS it is irrelevant for us I suppose. I think this is a way to try to lock people into using only Airbnb

We use Hospitable and it is compatible with multiple lock brands. It automatically uses the last 4 digits of the guest cell number and doesn't matter which booking platform, e.g. AirBnB, VRBO, etc.

i use the Schlage lock and yes, i integrate it so that it is the last 4 of their cell. it activates 1 hour before their reservation and deactivates 1 hour after. i dont even worry about it anymore, 1 less thing i have to think about.

In my opinion, Airbnb is trying to offer as PMS type functions as they can and be as user friendly as they can so people will ditch the PMS and OTA and only list on Airbnb.

I manually enter ours(and use same -last 4 digits of their number) in as I was nervous about integration- are there any glitches and do i need to erase all the codes I already did on the schlage app or? does air allow you to set the times, we coordinate ours within a half hour before allowable check in and right exactly at check out.

I just came back from the International Builders' Show in Las Vegas where Schlage had a big booth. Hard to call it a "booth" actually -- that show is so huge it was really more like the Schlage pavilion 😊

I talked to the Encode product manager for quite a while about integrations, including the new direct one with AirBnB, and some of their PMS integrations like with OwnerRez. They've also got integrations with a couple platforms that facilitate indirect integration with other PMS platforms. More on the way, so it should be getting easier to automate.

Maybe I'm just the odd man out here, but I don't want any of the booking sites providing any access information to my property before the guest's 4 PM check in time. I have had guests attempt to arrive at the home well before check in (one time before the previous guests even checked out on time!) and I don't want anyone being able to access the house before their time. I have the Schlage and I love the lock, but unless AirBnB is integrating with them to generate a code that IIRC someone noted this above that it will activate the code at your desired check in time.

Does anyone know if I can link multiple Schlage encodes to the same reservation? I am setting up an airbnb and still figuring out which channel manager I will use and the feasibility. Thanks in advance for insights! 🙏
