Airbnb not generating August lock codes with last 4 digits of guests' phone numbers

Question

We've been using the August lock with keypad synced with the Airbnb app. There's an option you can check off to make each guest's entry code the last 4 digits of their phone number. This doesn't seem to be working for me even though that option is checked off. I see that the codes never match the phone number in each guest's booking info. Does anyone else have this problem? Is this an Airbnb problem or August problem? Any idea how to fix this? Thanks.

I just manually create the code in the August app because I don't trust Airbnb to do it right.

person opened an airbnb and left a customers order inside the house because he had their cell number so used the last 4 at their airbnb and got in. We stopped doing it for that reason and started using their check in date instead

Interesting, thanks for sharing. I guess I will leave it then. It was just annoying because of how frequently I have to change the batteries in the keypad and lock, and I see the wrong codes getting punched in a lot on the app log.

good that it does NOT. Too easy for your place to be insecure. Better a random one for each person, each time.

How do you mean? We don't host any locals so all our guests are out-of-towners who likely wouldn't have anyone trying to break into their Airbnb. It seems easier to do the last 4 digits of their phone number because it seems like they're always inputting the wrong codes.

using a delivery service and a car service are 2 things that come to mind, where locals get the phone number.

Okay that's a good point. We are in an urban centre. Didn't think of it that way.
